11 Coaching Skills	1-hr self-paced online training. As a manager, you wear two hats that can be difficult to manage effectively, you have to evaluate your employees and make decisions regarding promotions, demotions, salary actions, and terminations. On the other hand, you are also a coach and an advocate for your employees' success. Employees may be reluctant to be frank and discuss weaknesses or mistakes. While there is no perfect solution, this course will help you to understand the problems and provide you with a strategy to effectively balance these two inherently conflicting roles. After completing this course, you will be able to apply the four-step coaching process, make clear separations between performance reviews and developmental coaching sessions, demonstrate how to listen effectively and with empathy, recognize how to discuss performance issues that will impact an employee's ability to achieve his/her goals.
